Valley Community Presbyterian Church (VCPC) is in downtown Richfield, Utah (46 East 200 South). "The mission chapel was erected 1880 as part of the efforts of the Reverend Duncan McMillan to evangelize Central Utah. Originally located on the corner of 1st South and Main Street, the building was torn down and rebuilt in its current location in 1937/38. This church also symbolizes an historic decision by the Protestant churches of Utah not to compete with one other in an area where their numbers were few, but united as a community church to serve all denominations."

What VCPC is looking for:

This program is for first call Pastors or seminary students close to receiving a call and is a commitment of 1 to 2 years. This is ideal for those students who would like to explore if God calls them into congregational ministry and would like to come and "play" in a church open to being a playground for ministerial development and growth. The congregation will provide housing, salary, access to National and State Parks, gift cards, invitations for dinner, recreational time with members and more. In return, the congregation will receive ministerial care.

The new pastor/seminary student will have time to continue his/her studies during their stay. Additionally, COM will provide oversight and mentorship as well as work closely with all involved to guarantee a good and inspiring playground experience.

Utah is a place where you can commune with God in a natural wide-open space, experience the deep gratitude of a loving congregation who is ready to embrace you with grace and love so you can grow into the Pastor God calls you to be.
